SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 7, 1860. THE LAST CHARGE OF NAPOLEON'S

OLD GUARD. Napeleon's "Old Guard" gained by their many desperate instances of bravery, an immortality in history, but their grand crowning act was their desperate charge at Waterleo, which has few parallels in ancient or fore particularly request all those who contemmodern warfare. They fought for their plate purchasing the coming season, to examine polored Emperor and to retrieve the evil for- carefully the McCORMICK MACHINE for 1860, conces of the day, they fell as though to do so would secure them immortal glory and eterand bliss in the world of spirits. The most graphic and stirring account of that last fearal end fatal struggle, that we have seen, is farmers as well as ourselves, should be fully satisfrom a recently published French work. It fied, as to the true merits of the different machines reads like war itself-this is it:-

During the day the artillery of the Guard. under Drouet, maintained its old renown, and the Guard itself had frequently been of the field, and always with success. The targish were fast becoming exhausted, and in an hour more would doubtless have been forced into a disastrous defeat but for the timely arrival of Blueher. But when they saw hire, with 30,000 Prussians approaching, their courage revived, while Napoleon was filled with amazement. A beaten enemy was about to form a junction with the allies, while Grouchy who had been sent to keep them in check, was nowhere to be seen.
